Members over 45 may pay $2 a month for $1,000 protection with the right to charge the remaining $1 or more a (according to age) against their certificate to be deducted with 4 per cent compound interest at death. This is purely optional.

This revision does not set very well with the majority of members especially among those of the older class, and a merry war is likely to ensue.

Many Lake county Woodmen have declared positively that they will not submit to the increased rates that have been adopted by the head camp and they say that they are willing to join any movement that may be launched to secede from the national organization and form a state camp.

Elgin is the first city to take any decided steps along this line and Silver Leaf camp of that city, one of the largest bodies of Woodmen in the state, purposes to hold a meeting next Friday night at which they will make plans for holding a state convention of Woodmen there, inviting delegates from all the different camps in the state to be present and take part in the discussion on whether or not the camps in Illinois should secede from the national organization and form a state body. It is proposed to hold the meeting early in March.

According to the leaders of the secession movement they are opposed to the high salaries of national officers of the present Woodmen organization. "We want insurance rates on an assessment basis," said one of the leaders. "We can do away with all of the high salaries of officers and form a state organization with a president and secretary and save hundreds of thousands of dollars to the members of the organization."

OLEO IS GIVEN A BOOST

Packing Company Advertising Butter Substitute in Unique Manner

That manufacturers of oleomargarine and other butter substitutes are attempting to force the general use of their products by buying up the butter supply of the country is the belief of Professor T. L. Haecker, college of agriculture, University of Minnesota, and known as the "father of dairying" in that state.

He states that for some time he has understood that the large packing interests of the country were contracting for all the butter they could get with the evident intention of extending the consumption of butter substitutes.

This is the explanation in part of the present butter shortage in the country. He does not believe that the surplus supply of butter in the country is sufficient to last only until Feb. 10.

Support is given to Prof. Haecker's belief that the packers are working hard to extend the use of butter substitutes by the fact that the Swift Packing Co. of South St. Paul has run several excursions of club women to its big oleomargarine plant there. Cars were chartered and the women given elaborate entertainment at the packing plant, including lectures on the making and the use of the butter substitute.

It is said that oleo is now used in hundreds of St. Paul homes where a week ago it had never been seen.

LAKE COUNTY FAIR ASSOCIATION MAY HAVE FIVE DAY FAIR

At a meeting of the board of directors of Lake county agricultural society held in the office of Paul MacGuffin last Saturday afternoon, it was decided to hold the 1912 fair the first week of September, beginning Tuesday, Sept. 8. As a means of systematizing the work of the board, the various classes of exhibits were grouped into three groups, each group being placed under the supervision of one of the directors as follows: Director Battershall—main hall, domestic manufactures, ornamental needlework, young folks, works of art, natural history, miscellaneous, arts and crafts.

Director Vickery—agricultural products, carriages, buggies, machinery, dairy, fruits, culinary, flowers, preserved fruits, poultry, vegetables, pantry stores, mechanical art.

Director Clow—horses, mules, cattle, sheep and swine.

Director Austin was made superintendent of grounds and Director Clarke superintendent of speed. The advisability and practicability of holding a five day event this year, among other questions was discussed and the matter laid upon the table to be considered at a future meeting of the board.

The Turbine. The first steam turbine-fitted vessel was constructed by the Hon. C. A. Parsons at his works at Newcastle-on-Tyne. The Turbinia, a small vessel 100 feet in length, made her trial trip November 4, 1894. The system rapidly developed owing to increased speed of the vessels fitted with turbine engines and the economy effected in coal; improvements were made in their construction, and today the turbine ship is popular the world over.

DEMAND RAISE OF MILK PRICE

Campaign Launched to Control the Market and Secure a Substantial Increase

ELECT OFFICERS FOR 1912

Directors from Lake County are Ralph Chittenden, Ed Kapple and John L. Cadmore

Milk producers of Illinois, Wisconsin and Indiana met in annual session at the Hotel Sherman, Chicago, Monday, and launched a campaign by which they hope to induce dealers who control the market in Chicago to grant a substantial increase in the price of summer milk. The meeting was a unit in the demand for a better price and it was expected that strongly worded resolutions would be passed urging this step on the part of the dealers.

The officer elected for the year follow: E. J. Fellows, St Charles, president. J. P. Grier, Evanston, secretary.

The directors from Lake county are: Ralph Chittenden, Ed Kapple, John Cadmore.

The present price of summer milk is two and five-eighths cents a quart to the producer and a boost of 3-4 cent will be sought. The winter price is 3-4 cents and it is deemed satisfactory, according to James P. Grier, secretary of the association. Unless the requests of the producers are heeded, they assert it is not improbable that the milk supply will be scarce during the summer, because they declare they cannot sell milk for the price they are receiving and make a profit.

"Some of the dealers realize the position of the producers and sympathize with them," said Mr. Grier today. "Next Summer either the producers will be given a substantial increase in the price of milk or they will not increase Chicago production. The dealers sell milk the year round for 8 cents a quart. What we want to do at this meeting is to arouse public opinion to a sense of justice of our stand. For that purpose the resolutions are to be passed and the association is to go on record."

In addition to a resolution demanding that the members be paid more for their product during the summer months the convention adopted resolutions asking that Congress refuse to take off the tax of ten cents per pound on colored oleomargarine.

V. S. Lumley an attorney from Woodstock, George M. Boyd, attorney for the Chicago Milk Dealers' association, and George B. Young, commissioner of health, spoke during the afternoon. Mr. Lumley made an attack upon the "Milk trust" and urged the farmers who produced milk to stand together and "get what's coming to them."

BANDIT YOUTH IS NEAR DEATH

Was Shot Friday While In the Act of Robbing a House At Lake Bluff

CANNOT MAKE STATEMENT

Father and Brother Are In Constant Attendance No One Else Is Admitted at the Hospital

With the confession of Ambrose Bodin, of Highland Park, Ravinia, Lake Forest, and other North Shore cities, and the suspicion again centers upon the head of the Waukegan boy, Gordon Fraleigh, now lying near death in the McAlister hospital.

Fraleigh was shot Friday while in the act of robbing a house at Lake Bluff, by Marshall Wayne Peterson, of Lake Bluff. The bullet passed through the right lung, and later pleurisy and pneumonia developed, giving the lad but a small chance for life.

According to the confession of Bodin as given to State's Attorney Dady by the chief of police of Highland Park, Bodin, on Jan. 3, entered the switchman's shanty at Highland Park, and stole therefrom the sum of $4.50. This act, states the confession, is the only act which Bodin has ever participated in. The shanty in question occupied by LeRoy Birchfield, switchman.

This confession, if true and there is no apparent reason to doubt its truth, eliminates Bodin from suspicion of the other acts along the North Shore, and again the suspicion rests on the wounded boy in the hospital. He has made no statement, since his conversation with Marshal Wayne Peterson at Lake Bluff, after the shooting, having been too ill. At present no one is allowed access to the room, except the brother and father of the boy, who are almost constant attendants.

Fraleigh is now near death, and it is feared he will never be able to make any statement, which will be able either to clear him from the charge made against him, or definitely fasten the alleged crimes upon his head.

IN MEMORY OF MRS. G. E. GAIL

Catherine Amelia Sheehan was born near Millburn, Ill., July 5, 1859, and died in Waukegan, Ill., Jan. 15, 1912, of typhoid fever. She was the eldest daughter of Daniel and Betsy Sheehan, one of a family of seven children, growing to womanhood in the community in which she was born.

She was married to Goodsel T. Gail, April 8, 1877, three children being born to them, two daughters and one son. One daughter died Aug. 19, 1901.

Those left to mourn her loss are her husband, son Lockwood, and daughter, Mrs. Jay Kay, and three grand children, an aged mother, two brothers and two sisters, William and Eugene Sheehan, and Mrs. Roy Fairman of Lake Villa, and Mrs. F. A. Hutchinson of Grays Lake.

She was a loving wife and devoted mother. Of her it can be truly said that no service was too great to render and no sacrifice to great to make for those she loved, and hosts of friends will ever cherish the memory of her who was ever ready to lend a helping hand to those in distress.

The funeral was held Thursday morning at nine o'clock from the church of the Immaculate Conception and burial at Mill Creek beside her daughter. A firm believer in the Catholic religion, she took her faith with her into eternity. May her soul rest in peace.

The Angels came one winter day And took our mother far away; They folded her hands across her breast And laid her down for that long, long rest.

O mother dear, how we will miss you When the summer comes again; But we will miss you more by our bed-side When in sickness and in pain.

We will miss your kind and gentle words, Your fond and loving care. O mother dear we miss you, Yes we miss you everywhere.

O yes, you were always ready. A helping hand to lend To those that were in distress, A kind and loving friend. But now, dear mother, we will bid you Alas a sad good bye; Until we will meet you with our dear sister In that home beyond the sky.

TO INVESTIGATE CHARGES

Father Foley Wishes to End Rumors That Fire Was Incendiary

Father Foley of St. Patrick's church near Wadsworth, on Wednesday made public a defi to those who have directly or indirectly insinuated that the old St. Patrick's church which was burned to the ground last December was the work of an incendiary.

In fact it is stated that he has made a request to officers of the Millburn Mutual Insurance Company to take up the instant reports and investigate to the limit, promising that he would co-operate with them and assured them that his attorney would work with them.

In his statement he said "There are many would be Catholics and some Protestants who have insinuated that the old church was set afire in order to get the insurance and I am tired of hearing these remarks, none made directly to me but coming to me in an indirect way. I would be most happy if the Millburn Insurance Company which carried an $1,800 policy on the church, would investigate. Why he continued the insurance was not sufficient to cover the furnishings let alone the building. The loss was about $5,000. And now let the matter be taken up and these people who have started these reports be given a chance to prove their assertions and insinuations or to have them disproved."

The reason such a report might have started is likely due to the fact that a new church is just being completed to take the place of the old landmark. The old one to be vacated when the new one was finished, but since the fire the parish has had no place to meet until last Sunday when the new church was used for the first time, although it is still incomplete. It will now be used right along although the dedication will not take place until June or July. The new edifice will cost about $15,000.

Special mention should be made of Robert Lux, of Wadsworth, the village selling the largest number per capita seals. This boy sold 113 of the 711 sold.

For Baby's Eyes. Mothers, please do not send your babies out without any shade for the eyes. Even though it is not summer time, they should not be allowed to lie with the sun shining in their eyes. All sorts of troubles result from this, eye inflammations of many kinds, often defective vision and nervous conditions, which remain for life. If you would try lying with the sun shining in your eyes for an hour or so you would soon realize how disagreeable it is for a baby in a gown or carriage to be subjected to it.

SYNOPSIS.

Jack Keith, a Virginian, now a border plainsman, is looking for roaming war parties of savages. He sees a wagon team at full gallop pursued by men on ponies. When Keith reaches the wagon the raiders have massacred two men and departed. He searches the victims' pockets and finds a letter with a woman's portrait. Keith is arrested at Carson City, charged with the murder, his accuser being a ruffian named Black Bart. A negro companion in his cell named Ned tells him that he knew the Virginian in Virginia. Ned says one of the murdered men was John Shiley, the other Gen. Willis Walte, formerly a Confederate officer. The plainsman and Ned escape, and later the fugitives come upon a cabin and find its occupant to be a young girl, whom Keith thinks he saw at Carson City. The girl explains that she is in search of a brother, who has deserted from the army, and that a Mr. Hawley induced her to come to the cabin while he sought her brother. Hawley appears, and Keith in hiding recognizes him as Black Bart. There is a terrific battle in the darkened room in which Keith is victor. Hawley is appropriated, and the girl who says that her name is Hope, joins in the escape. Keith explains his situation and the fugitives make for Fort Larned, where the girl is left with the hotel landlady. Miss Hope tells that she is the daughter of General Walte, Keith and Ned drift into Sheridan, where Keith meets an old friend, Dr. Fairbairn. Keith meets the brother of Hope Walte, under the assumed name of Fred Willoughby, and becomes convinced that Black Bart has some plot involving the two. Hope learns that Gen. Walte, who was thought murdered, is at Sheridan, and goes there, where she is mistaken for Christine MacLaure, the Carson City singer. Keith meets the real Christine MacLaure and finds that Black Bart has convinced her that there is a mystery in her life which he is going to turn to her advantage. The plainsman tells Hope Walte of her resemblance to Christine MacLaure. They decide that Fred Willoughby may hold the key to the situation. Keith finds Willoughby shot dead. Hope is told of the death of her brother. Keith fails to learn what representations Black Bart has made to Christine MacLaure. Hope suggests that in order to learn the secret she must briefly impersonate the stage singer. Dr. Fairbairn is in love with Christine MacLaure and Keith induces him to detain her from the stage while Hope goes to the theater where she meets Black Bart who, thus deceived, tells Hope that General Walte has suspected his plans and that they must fly. Hope, greatly alarmed, demurs.

CHAPTER XXX.

In Christine's Room.

Keith swept his glance up and down the street without results. Surely Hawley and his companion could not have disappeared so suddenly. They had turned to the right, he was certain as to that, and he pushed through the crowd of men around the theater entrance, and hastened to overtake them. He found nothing to overtake—nowhere along that stretch of street, illumined by window lights, was there any sign of a man and woman walking together. He stopped, bewildered, staring blindly about, falling utterly to comprehend this mysterious vanishing. What could it mean? What had happened? How could they have disappeared so completely during that single moment he had waited to speak to Fairbairn? The man's heart beat like a trip-hammer with apprehension, a sudden fear for Hope taking possession of him. Surely the girl would never consent to enter any of those dens along the way, and Hawley would not dare resort to force in the open street. The very thought seemed preposterous, and yet, with no other supposition possible, he entered these one after the other in hasty search, questioning the inmates sharply, only to find himself totally baffled—Hawley and Hope had vanished as though swallowed by the earth. He explored dark passage-ways between the scattered buildings, rummaging about recklessly, but came back to the street again without reward.

Could they have gone down the other side, in the deeper shadows, and thus reached the hotel more quickly than it seemed to him possible? There was barely a chance that this could be true, and yet Keith grasped at it desperately, cursing himself for having wasted time. Five minutes later, breathless, almost speechless with anxiety, he startled the clerk.

"Has Miss Walte come in? Miss Hope Walte?"

"Blamed if I know," retorted the other, indifferently. "Can't for the life of me tell those two females apart. One of them passed through 'bout ten minutes ago; Doc Fairbairn was with her. Another party just went upstairs hunting Miss MacLaure, and as they haven't come down, I reckon it must have been her—anything wrong?"

"I'm not sure yet," shortly. "Who was this other person?"

"Old fellow with white hair and askers—awoke like a pirate—had sheriff along with him."

"Perhaps Christine knew. Certainly something of importance was crystallizing in the actress' room which she helped to explain all else. He rushed up the stairs, barely waiting to stop once at the closed door before he pressed it open. The slight within told him silent, waiting opportunity to blurt out his news. Here, also, was tragedy, intense, compelling, which for the instant seemed to even overshadow the fate of the girl he loved. There were three men present, and the woman stood clutching the back of a chair, white-faced and open-eyed, with Fairbairn slightly behind her, one hand grasping her in the other, clenched, his jaw set anxiously. Facing these two was Walte, and a heavily built man wearing a brown beard, closely trimmed.

"You'd better acknowledge it," Walte snapped out, with a quick glance at the newcomer. "It will make it all the easier for you. I tell you this is the sheriff, and we've got you both dead to rights."

"But," she urged, "why should I be arrested? I have done nothing."

"You're an adventuress—a damn adventuress—Hawley's mistress, probably—a—"

"Now, see here, Walte," and Fairbairn swung himself forward, "you drop that. Miss MacLaure is my friend, and if you say another word I'll smash you, sheriff or no sheriff."

Walte glared at him.

"You old fool," he snorted, "what have you got to do with this?"

"I've got this to do with, you'll find—the woman is to be treated with respect or I'll blow your damned obstinate head off."

The sheriff laid his hand on Walte's shoulder.

"Come," he said, firmly, "this is no way to get at it. We want to know certain facts, and then we can proceed lawfully. Let me question the woman."

"The two older men still faced one another belligerently, but Keith saw Christine draw the doctor back from between her and the sheriff.

saying a dying man had left with him certain papers, naming one, Phyllis Gale, as heiress to a very large estate in North Carolina, left by her grandfather in trust. He said the girl had been taken West, when scarcely two years old, by her father in a fit of drunken rage, and then deserted by him in St. Louis.

"You—you saw the papers?" Walte broke in.

"Yes, those that Hawley had; he gave them to me to keep for him."

She crossed to her trunk, and came back, a manilla envelope in her hand. Walte opened it hastily, running his eyes over the contents.

"The infernal scoundrel!" he exclaimed, hotly. "These were stolen from me at Carson City."

"Let me see them." The sheriff ran them over, merely glancing at the endorsements.

"Just as you represented, Walte," he said, slowly. "A copy of the will, your commission as guardian, and memoranda of identification. Well, Miss MacLaure, how did you happen to be so easily convinced that you were the lost girl?"

"Mr. Hawley brought me a picture which he said was of this girl's half-sister; the resemblance was most startling. This, with the fact that I have never known either father or mother or my real name, and that my Representative Mann, leader of the minority, is the author of the measure to prohibit the admission into the United States of adulterated seed or seeds that are unfit for seeding purposes. It has been pointed out time and again that the States is being constantly used as the dumping ground for poor seeds and diseased nursery stock from the European countries, and such destructive pests as the brown tail moth and the boll weevil are traceable to European importations. A bill was before Congress during the special session, providing for the inspection of nursery stock imported from foreign countries, but this like many other agricultural measures calling for appropriations, did not meet with success. However, it is quite probable, with a powerful member like Mr. Mann pushing for better laws in reference to seeds, that something will result therefrom.

Sometime ago it was proposed that in view of the fact that a roll call in the House of Representatives requires practically one half hour, that an electric system whereby the members could immediately register their votes in such a way that they could be announced within one or two minutes, would be a fine acquisition in the House of Representatives and in keeping with the spirit of the times. It, however, was discovered that the constitution of the United States prohibited any mechanical contrivance, as roll calls and individual voting are provided in the present document of all legislation. However, Mr. Copley of Aurora, Illinois, who builds traction lines and other things of that kind, where electricity is good for all purposes, has introduced a resolution providing for a committee to investigate and report upon "an electrical voting device in the House of Representatives for the purpose of recording the aye and nay votes of the members."

The People's Food

Senator Hoke Smith wants to give federal aid directly to the states in aid of advanced agriculture. He has introduced a bill providing for appropriations to the states to aid in carrying on the work of the federal department and the state colleges. His purpose is to carry directly to the farming people useful knowledge on all that pertains to farm life, and to extend and make more available the work now being done.

Senator Smith believes that a large amount of the work of the various agricultural departments, colleges and schools does not reach the people who most need it. It reaches those who are seeking such aid, but in every section there are many farmers who do not seek advancement. To those he means only, he believes, can the general average of farm intelligence be brought to the point it must reach if the land is to bear its full fruits and the food of the country be raised with profit to the raiser and given with economy to the consumer.

Therefore he asks that an appropriation of $6,000 the first year be given every state which complies with the requirements of the bill—which are simple and aimed at getting the teaching of the schools to the backward farmers, as well as to the ambitious ones—an additional $300,000 to be added to the total each year, and distributed on the same basis. And this is all to be used to vitalize the vast amount of information gathered by the departments and colleges and have it bear fruits in larger ratio to its value than it heretofore has been bearing.

Speaking of foreign complications, no sooner had this country taken steps to abrogate the treaty with Russia than Ambassador Lelshman in Berlin loses his gold-embroidered trousers.

which they intend to support and announce their determined opposition to the false policies against which they propose to stand.

Therefore: A Convention will be held in the City of Springfield (the home of Abraham Lincoln,) on Monday, February 12, 1912 (the 103rd anniversary of his birth,) for the purpose of framing positive declarations upon questions of public policy, State and National, and embodying them in a formal platform, and for the purpose of making arrangements for a state-wide campaign upon behalf of the platform so announced, and to endorse a candidate for United States Senator, a candidate for Governor, two candidates for Congressmen-at-Large, and candidates for such other state offices as the convention in its wisdom may determine, who are in accord with the platform adopted and who will conduct their campaigns fearlessly upon the issues involved in the principles proclaimed, and whose past public records furnished a guarantee of redemption of platform pledges made, so that Primary voters may intelligently cast their ballots.

This said convention is to assemble at 10:00 o'clock in the morning, in the place provided for the holding of same, and is to organize in accordance with recognized parliamentary procedure.

The said convention is to be comprised of delegates, who subscribe to the time honored principles of the Republican party, from every county in the State, on the basis of one delegate for every four hundred votes or major fraction thereof, cast for the Republican for State Treasurer, on Nov. 8, 1910.

The chairman of each county organization of the Lincoln Protective League of Illinois will report the name and address of each delegate, from his county to the officers of the League at Springfield, Illinois, so that proper credentials may be issued therefor.

The Lincoln Protective League of Illinois cordially invites the co-operation of the popularity of constitutional and representative government.

Foolish Question. The editor of the woman's page was on his vacation and the sporting editor had jumped into the breach. "Well, what do you think of this?" he snorted, as he held up a perfumed communication. The Preacher Knew. When volunteer prayers were called for a man struck in and prayed very earnestly for his poor land, and asked the Lord to give him a good crop. "What that land of yours needs, brother, is not prayer, but manure," said the preacher, as he gave out, "Work, for the Night Is Coming."

Although the wound was a very painful one it is not thought that any serious results will follow.

His Economy. The children in the Blank family were taught habits of neatness at the table by being compelled to pay a fine of 1 cent for every spot they put on the tablecloth. One day Harold, a boy of seven years, was discovered rubbing the overhanging part of the cloth between his fingers, and, when taken to task for it, he said: "Why, Mummy, I was just trying to rub two spots into one!"—Woman's Home Companion.

London Good Oyster Market. London is a great consumer of oysters. The cheapness of the delicacy half a century ago created a demand for it, which has hung with the appetites of the people as tenaciously as the habit of smoking a pipe has among the men. It is estimated that London consumes a billion a year, and the record shows that in 1864, when prices were very low, 700,000,000 were eaten.

RUSSIA'S ROAD INTO CHINA

Mongolia is a Land of Magnificence of Middle Ages Mingled With Squalor.

When the bumping tarantass rolls across the Chinese frontier into Mongolia it enters a kingdom of the middle ages flung down into the twentieth century.

Feudal princes, lords of armies armed with spear and bow, tax and drive to the corvee their nomad serfs. A hierarchy of priests, whose divine head lives in a palace at Holy Urga, heads the multitude of superstition-steeped Mongols, and receives the homage of pilgrims wending their way from the Volga, from Tibet, from all Mongolia, to their Canterbury of Lamas.

In prostrate devotion the penitents girdle the Sacred City, before whose hovels beggars dispute with dogs their common nourishment, and in whose compounds princes of the race of Genghis Khan, with armies of retainers, live bedless, bathless, lightless, in the felt huts of their race.

Squalid magnificence and good-humored, kindly hospitality are linked to utter brutality. Sable furs and silks cover sheepskins worn until they drop from the body.

Here and there among the natives a Chinese trading caravansary, alien, walled, peculiar, stands as of old the Hansatow, with merchant guilds and far-brought caravan goods.

The Russian advance has been always eastward, toward an ice-free port on the Pacific. Cut off by the Japanese, the one outlet now for Russia is through Mongolia, striking straight for Peking and the heart of China.

This is the century-old road of the tea trade. Here is the shortest route from Europe to the East. Here, through the defiles and the broken foothills of the Gobi plateau, lies the future redemption of the great unfettered land route to north China.

The Chinese are themselves advancing to anticipate it. They have already built into Kalgan. To this trading center across the pale a Russian railway may yet pass, and her colonists make fruitful the unpeopled wilds of Mongolia.

A way of adventure and strangeness, where the years turn back, is this old road of the Golden Horde, leading down past the ancestral homes of the Turks to the Great Wall. —"The Russian Road in China."

Where Dickens Saw Life.
It was on the roads round about Gadshill, where Charles Dickens lived before his death, that he made the acquaintance of the various tramps and showmen we read of in his works—the tales of their lives, and lives so often made up of many sorrows. The great novelist's knowledge of gypsy wanderers and loafers was unbounded, and many a half hour he spent in their company within a stone's throw of his home. When he wrote that wonderful chapter on tramps in "The Uncommercial Traveller," he had in mind the high road at Gadshill. —"The Land That Was Dickens," Oscar Frick, in National Magazine.

He Knew.
In one of New York's public schools the other day this sentence appeared in the reading lesson:
"The king and his escort passed by."
"Now," said the teacher, "who can tell me what is meant by an 'escort'?"
A small, freckled-faced boy raised his hand, and in the vernacular of the East Side said:
"It's a fellow what's got a girl and he takes her out walking."

Glorious of the Great.
The following anecdote is told by Joseph Jackson in the World's Work. On one occasion when Dickens had a few of his choice spirits to dinner, as they passed into his apartment the clerk of the hotel, who seems to have been a great lover of literature, but-tonholed Boz's secretary long enough to exclaim with a kind of reverential awe: "Good heaven! Mr. Putnam, to think what the four walls of that room now contain! Washington Irving, William C. Bryant, Fitz-Greene Halleck and Charles Dickens!"

Adulteration an Old Crime.
Champagne and claret will doubtless be produced in large quantities this year, despite the general failure of the French vineyard, says the London Chronicle. "The art of making wine without grapes is an ancient one. As far back as 1427 one hundred pipes of wine were seized in London because no trace of grape juice could be found in them. The citizens flocked to see the public staving in of the pipes and the unusual watering of the streets which followed thereupon."

Custom Very Old.
The practice of making eunuchs is supposed to have had its beginning under the Assyrians, the reputed builders of Babylon, and was commonly adopted by Oriental monarchs in the case of the eunuchs of their harems.

The Clothes Are the Thing.
"What on earth you keep clapping for? That last dress was awful."
"I know; but I liked the style of her clothes, and I want to have another look at them."

PAIR END LIVES

FREDERICK NOBLE AND WIFE
END THEIR ELOPEMENT IN DOUBLE SUICIDE.

DEATH SEALS THE MOTIVE

Woman Regretted Flight From Walter L. Suydam, Millionaire Husband—Couple Had Been Married But Three Months.

New York.—Double suicide ended the sensational romance of the former wife of Walter L. Suydam and Frederick Noble, the young plumber, for the love of whom Mrs. Suydam ran away from her millionaire husband and married in September last, Mr. Suydam divorced his wife that she might wed the man who had supplanted him in her affections.

Clasped in each other's arms they were found lifeless from gas asphyxiation in their pretty apartment at 82 West Twelfth street. There was no possibility of accident.

Their street clothes had been laid carefully away; every room had been put to rights; one door had been bolted and the other barricaded, so that no one might enter until the deadly fumes had done their work.

They left no farewell message, no written explanation. But in the minds of the few persons who knew them—especially the girl—late in their motive was entirely clear.

They were not happy together. They never really loved each other. The young wife never loved any man except Walter Lispenard Suydam, the millionaire husband from whom she ran away on September 6 last. Fred Noble, the son of a Brooklyn plumber, knew this; knew that she married him only to set herself right as might be before the world. He married her only to give her what standing a wedding ring might impart.

SAYS M'GOWAN NOTES FAKED

Official Stenographer of Lorimer Senate Committee Asserts Burns' Evidence is Manufactured.

Washington.—Milton W. Blumenberg, official stenographer of the senatorial committee investigating the election of Senator Lorimer, was held in contempt by the committee when he volunteered in open hearing the opinion that stenographic notes introduced to support the perjury charge against Charles McGowan were faked. Blumenberg was ordered placed in the custody of E. L. Cornelius, assistant sergeant-at-arms of the senate. The official stenographer's action was unprecedented and caused a sensation.

Blumenberg's assistants declare that for several days he has been on the verge of a collapse.

Blumenberg admitted before the committee that he had given his opinion on the authenticity of the notes privately to Edward Hines. Blumenberg had given no intimation to members or counsel for the committee that he believed the notes to be faked or that he intended to volunteer such an opinion in a public hearing.

The notes in question purported to be an exact record of what took place in a conversation between McGowan, Arthur C. Bailey, a Burns detective, and Harry E. Kerr of Detroit in the King Edward hotel, Toronto.

James E. Sheridan, stenographer and private secretary to William J. Burns, claimed to have taken the shorthand notes in an adjoining room by means of a dictagraph.

Sheridan's notes supported the testimony of Bailey and Kerr that McGowan admitted he received $1,500 from C. F. Wiehe for giving perjured testimony in his defense before the senatorial committee last summer.

NIAGARA ICE BRIDGE BREAKS

Man, Woman and Youth Are Carried to Death in Niagara River Disaster.

Niagara Falls.—Three people, a man, a woman and a youth, went to their deaths here when the ice bridge which every winter spans the lower gorge between the American falls and the upper steel arch bridge broke from its moorings and floated down the river. The youth was Burrell Heacock of East One Hundred and Seventh street, Cleveland, O. The couple is supposed to be Mr. and Mrs. Eldridge Stanton of 347 Huron street, Toronto, Ont., who came here to view the "ice scenery."

Heacock lost his life in a futile effort to assist the man in an attempt to save his wife. He might have followed his chum, Ignatius Roth, also of Cleveland, to safety before the bridge disintegrated, but he was then assisting the man with the woman, and before he realized it the bridge had broken into pieces and Heacock found himself on a small floe of ice floating down the river.

Rush to See Morgan Art.

Military Aviator Falls 200 Feet.

EIGHT DIE IN RIOTS

CITIZENS FLEE FROM JUAREZ AS CITY IS OVERTHROWN.

Scores Shot, Stores and Saloons Looted, Prisoners in Jail Liberated to Quell Mutineers.

El Paso, Tex.—Juarez, Mex., just across the Rio Grande river, is practically deserted following the rioting led by mutinous, drunken troops, who seized the town, shot scores of citizens, looted many stores and saloons, and burned property valued at $275,000.

Eight persons are dead and many wounded. Anarchy and mob law prevail, as the municipal government has been overturned and the officials have fled for their lives.

More trouble seems inevitable, as 600 of Madero's soldiers are said to be on the way to quell the mutineers. When the troops will arrive is not known, as the railroad lines have been blocked by the rebels. The mutineers say they will fight any force sent against them.

The leaders met in the plaza and appointed administrative officers. Santiago Mestas was chosen provisional mayor.

Nearly all the residents of Juarez have fled to El Paso and many of the poorer families are camping in the open country on the American bank of the Rio Grande.

MRS. McLEAN GETS HOPE GEM

Washington Woman Wears Famous Diamond at Reception—Litigation Settled.

Washington.—Mrs. Evelyn Walsh McLean, wife of Edward McLean and daughter of the late Thomas F. Walsh, the mine owner, now is the lawful owner of the famous Hope diamond. She wore it for the first time when Mr. and Mrs. McLean gave a reception in honor of the Russian ambassador.

Millionaire McLean bought the gem as a present for his wife several months ago, but a dispute arose between him and the New York jeweler who made the sale as to the price, and the case was carried into court. The litigation has been settled.

The price finally paid has not been learned definitely, but it is known that the figure is not far from the price asked in the first place, $250,000.

GRAIN OUTPUT IS IMMENSE

Northwestern Elevators to Contain 60,000,000 Bushels in Spring—Amount Is Unprecedented.

Duluth, Minn.—Prospects are that there will be 60,000,000 bushels of grain between the Duluth and Superior and the Port Arthur and Fort William elevators at the opening of navigation next spring. This is said to be unprecedented. Winnipeg estimates that the Canadian grain of the present crop will be sent east via the American head of the lakes for next spring will aggregate about 15,000,000 bushels.

PENSION BILL IS PASSED

Measure Abolishes Seventeen Agencies Maintained in Various Cities—Hits Non-Residents.

Washington.—The pension appropriation bill, carrying about $152,000,000, passed the house by a vote of 245 to 33, after several southern Democrats had demanded a roll call vote. A provision excluding pensioners who live out of the United States was defeated by 160 to 133. The bill abolishes 17 pension agencies which have been maintained in different cities.

VESSEL SINKS; 14 DROWN

British Gunboat Rams Submarine and All on Board of Latter Are Drowned.

Portsmouth, England.—Ten sailors and four lieutenants were drowned here when the submarine "A3" was rammed by the British gunboat Hazard.

The submarine sank like a stone, with a great tear in her armor, and none on board had a chance to escape. The submarine went out of the harbor for a series of diving and torpedo exercises.

DEFEAT FOR PUBLICITY BILL

Provision in Measure Requiring President to Give Out Names of Indorsees Rejected.

Washington.—A provision in the house bill to rearrange the judiciary of the Seventh United States circuit in Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin, which would require the president before appointing a judge, to make public his indorsements, has been thrown out by a sub-committee of the senate judiciary committee. The bill, as a whole, was not acted upon.

Disease Causes Amputation.
Davenport, Ia.—Surgeons amputated the left foot of Nevyn Morrison, son of Bishop T. W. Morrison of the Episcopal diocese of Iowa, because he is suffering from the uncommon and mysterious Rataudis disease, and the blood had ceased to circulate through the foot, resulting in gangrene.

General Trowbridge Is Dead.
Detroit, Mich.—Gen. Luther S. Trowbridge, one of Michigan's best known military and political characters, died here, aged seventy-five.

PROGRESSIVE AT INTERNATIONAL DOORS

FIND FOUR SLAIN

SON MAY HAVE KILLED FATHER, TWO BROTHERS AND SISTER.

Believed William Mallahn Shot His Parent, Cut the Throats of Other Members of Family and Then Slew Himself.

Appleton, Wis.—There is much mystery over the discovery of four dead bodies in the farm house of Lewis Mallahn, near Binghamton, fifteen miles northwest of this city. The father was dead from a gunshot wound and his three children had their throats cut. A suicide and double murder is suspected.

The dead:
Lewis Mallahn, aged sixty-six years; shot in head; William Mallahn, aged twenty-one years; Dora Mallahn, aged sixteen years; John Mallahn, aged eight years.

The bodies were discovered by George Mallahn, aged fifteen years, when he returned from the district school, which is two miles from his home. The boy found his sister lifeless on the kitchen floor. He informed his brother, Walter, aged fourteen, who accompanied him from school, and another brother, Edward, aged twenty-four, who had brought the two home on a sled on which he had been hauling wood.

Lewis Mallahn's body was found in the barn, and those of John and William were discovered in the smoke-house.

The opinion of those who visited the home is that William Mallahn was responsible for the four deaths.

A fancied grievance over favors extended to other members of the family is thought to have inspired the deed.

ARABS SHOOT AVIATOR SPY

Captain Monte of Italian Army Is Wounded After Dropping Missiles On Enemy.

Tripoli.—Captain Monte, an Italian military aviator, was severely wounded in a spectacular aerial battle with Arabs while flying over their encampment near Tobruk in Cyrenaica.

Captain Monte set out in an aeroplane to ascertain the strength of an Arabian force which of late has been harassing the Italian outposts and came upon their headquarters at Tobruk. With him in the machine was an army officer. They circled high over the camp and dropped several bombs, all of them taking effect. The Arab sharpshooters then formed in a great circle and opened fire on the air craft. The aeroplane was hit four times, one of the bullets striking Captain Monte. He was able to maintain his seat with the assistance of his companion and they flew back to camp with the information which they set out to obtain.

Jay Gould Is Now Father.
New York.—Mr. and Mrs. Jay Gould are receiving congratulations on the birth of a daughter. Mrs. Jay Gould was Miss Annie Douglas Graham, a daughter of a former marriage of Mrs. Hubert Vos. Her marriage to Jay Gould, who is the second son of Mr. and Mrs. George J. Gould, took place at St. Thomas church last April.

Royal Arcanum Gets $5,902,100.

Senator Thomas Grady Dead.
New York.—State Senator Thomas F. Grady, widely known in Democratic councils in state and nation and familiarly called "The Silver Tongued Orator of Tammany Hall," is dead here.

CRACKED HANDS ARE HEALED

Woman Suffered for Years. Resinol Worked Immediately.

During the winter many people suffer untold agony from chapped and cracked hands. The manner of washing and drying the hands, the water, exposure, blood and innumerable other things may cause this. To persons suffering in this way, or from any skin eruption, this woman's experience should prove invaluable.

"I highly prize Resinol Soap and Ointment. For years I had suffered with my hands cracking. Had used all kinds of salve, but to no avail, until one day a sample box of Resinol Ointment was sent to our home. Almost discouraged, I had suffered so long with my hands, I opened the package and began reading some of the testimonials. Finally I tried it, and the effect was wonderful. It seemed to take the soreness away, and immediately began to heal, and in a few days (using it every night) my hands were entirely healed. I feel that I cannot get along without Resinol Ointment, and recommend it with pleasure, whenever an opportunity presents itself.

"MRS. MATTIE R. SHORT, 'Somerville, Mass.'"

Resinol Ointment is the most wonderful skin remedy today. For sores, pimples, every form of eruptive skin disease, irritation and inflammation, eczema, tetter, milk crust, scald head, ringworm, barber's itch, pimples, blackheads, chilblains, cracked lips, chaps, burns and scalds it is an effective and reliable remedy. It soothes, relieves the pain and heals. Resinol Soap is also very healing and a perfect toilet soap. Your druggist will recommend Resinol Ointment and sell it to you in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes, or you can make a free trial of it by writing for sample to Department 89, Resinol Chemical Co., Baltimore, Md.

A DRAW.

Cholly—Oh! the boastful it's true he wumped my cawpat dweadfully, but when it was all ovah his collah was twighfully wilted.

Ready for Anything.
A popular neighbor had just passed to the great beyond in a rural Pennsylvania community and the undertaker stood at the door of the home, when he heard the following remarks by the minister:
"Mine brethren and sisters, Joe Thomas he is dead. Maybe Joe Thomas he go to heaven up I no know, and maybe Joe Thomas he go to hell down I no know, but mine brethren and sisters, we must be brebarred to meet him."

THE CARELESS GROCER

Blundered, and Great Good Came of It.

A careless grocer left the wrong package at a Michigan home one day and thereby brought a great blessing to the household.
"Two years ago I was a sufferer from stomach troubles, so acute that the effort to digest ordinary food gave me great pain, and brought on a condition of such extreme nervousness that I could not be left alone. I thought I should certainly become insane. I was so reduced in flesh that I was little better than a living skeleton. The doctors failed to give me relief and I despaired of recovery."

"One day our groceryman left a package of Grape-Nuts food by mistake, so I tried some for dinner. I was surprised to find that it satisfied my appetite and gave me no distress whatever. The next meal I ate of it again, and to be brief, I have lived for the past year almost exclusively on Grape-Nuts. It has proved to be a most healthful and appetizing food, perfectly adapted to the requirements of my system."

"Grape-Nuts is not only easily digested and assimilated, but I find that since I have been using it I am able to eat anything else my appetite fancies, without trouble from indigestion. The stomach trouble and nervousness have left me, I have regained my plumpness and my views of life are no longer despondent and gloomy."

"Other members of my family, especially my husband, (whose old enemy, the heart-burn, has been vanquished) have also derived great benefit from the use of Grape-Nuts food and we think no morning meal complete without it." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

"There's a reason," and it is explained in the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

LINCOLN MEMORIALS and STATUES

A GRATEFUL nation has been anything but tardy in affording tangible evidence of its gratitude to the man who as President of the republic guided the Union through the most trying period of its history. Tributes in marble and bronze to Abraham Lincoln are to be found in all parts of the United States, and additions to the list are constantly being made. Later there has been a disposition on the part of our public men and influential citizens to devise in recognition of the services of the Civil War President memorials of even more elaborate and imposing character than the statues that have been erected in so many of the states that he labored to keep under one flag.

A recent notable instance of this trend was found in the provision of an impressive memorial structure on the famous "Lincoln farm" in Kentucky. The erection of this monumental edifice, which was dedicated by President Taft only a few months ago, represents but one phase of an ambitious project to restore and protect the birthplace of Lincoln and the scene of his early life, making it, as it should be, a patriotic mecca to which great numbers of Lincoln's fellow-countrymen will make pilgrimages just as they do to the home of George Washington at Mount Vernon, and to the home and tomb of Thomas Jefferson at Charlottesville, Virginia.

Even more pretentious is the project now before congress for a $2,000,000 memorial to Lincoln that shall be in the fullest sense a tribute from the reunited nation. Visitors to the seat of government in recent years have often expressed wonder that whereas there are in Washington appropriate testimonials to the Father of His Country and other national idols, there has been no memorial commensurate with the commanding place which Lincoln has occupied in the history of the country. The government has not been unconscious of this lack, but merely deferred action until such time as there could be provided a tribute worthy of the great man who inspired it. This is now assured, owing to the liberal sum that will be expended in this labor of love. From the time it was decided that the occasion had arrived for congress to take definite action with reference to a national Lincoln memorial there has been discussion and difference of opinion as to the form which this acknowledgment of the nation's gratitude should take. Most of the men having voice in the matter seem to have come to the conclusion that the ideal memorial will be a massive monumental structure—a sort of temple of fame to be built of white marble on the banks of the Potomac at Washington and adorned with statues of Lincoln and representations of persons and events conspicuously identified with his career. The effect would be, of course, to create a companion patriotic shrine to that at George Washington's Mount Vernon estate a few miles farther down the same river.

However, many persons of prominence have all along argued in favor of other forms of memorial. A memorial bridge between the national capital and the national cemetery at Arlington beyond the Potomac has repeatedly been suggested and so has a memorial arch, but probably sentiment has been strongest for a Lincoln memorial boulevard or highway. The proposal has been to construct this highway as a connecting link between the national capital and the battlefield at Gettysburg where Lincoln delivered his immortal speech. The chief objection to this scheme is that the highway could be used and enjoyed only by people who had automobiles or other vehicles of their own or the means to hire such conveyances. While on the subject of these elaborate Lincoln memorials it may be noted that first place in this category belongs, of course, to the Lincoln tomb at Springfield, Illinois. The monument to Lincoln at Springfield, alike to the monuments to our other martyr presidents—Garfield and McKinley—is not merely public but national. For the Lincoln monument the sum of $200,000 was collected. Of this sum $28,000 came from the soldiers of the Civil war, and $8,000 of this amount was contributed by the negro troops out of the first money they ever earned. The Lincoln monument has had to be reconstructed several times and entirely rebuilt once, owing to the character of the foundation, and these circumstances necessitated the removal of Lincoln's body, which, all told, has been moved some ten or twelve times since the original burial. Certainly one of the most commendable of all the existing memorials to Lincoln is the Lincoln Memorial University of Claiborne county, Tennessee, which was founded by Gen. O. O. Howard, one of the most devoted of Lincoln's admirers, and the object of which is to benefit the people from whom Lincoln sprang, the mountaineers of the Cumberland Gap region. The grounds of the university contain six hundred acres and there are several buildings upon them, although more are needed. The university was chartered by the State of Tennessee on Lincoln's birthday in 1897 and has already performed a tremendous service for the people of an isolated region which may be said to offer no other similar educational advantages. It has been claimed that owing to the handicap which Lincoln himself sustained in early life, owing to ignorance and poverty, he would, if he could choose, probably prefer this memorial in the Tennessee mountains to any other that could be reared to his memory. Of the numerous statues of Lincoln which have place in cities and towns all over the United States the most notable, from an artistic standpoint, are two executed by the late Augustus St. Gaudens, America's greatest sculptor. Both of these statues are figures of heroic size. One which represents Lincoln standing has been erected in Lincoln Park in the city of Chicago, whereas the other, which shows Lincoln seated, was a gift to the South Side of Chicago by bequest of the late John Crear of that city. The St. Gaudens head of Lincoln was selected by the national government for reproduction on the Lincoln commemorative postage stamp, which was issued by the Post Office Department a year or so ago.

The work of the sculptors who are called upon to reproduce the features of Lincoln in marble or bronze is greatly facilitated by the fact that there are in existence excellent life and death masks which faithfully portray the countenance of the kindly ruler at the time he first took office and at various periods up to his death. The making of the life mask of Lincoln was, by the way, a rather trying ordeal for the president, who was obliged to sit for an hour with the plaster covering his face, but not interfering with his eyesight or breathing.

Mr. Lincoln himself assisted in removing the mask, a particularly difficult task owing to his high cheekbones, but the undertaking was entirely successful, the mask coming off in one piece and being especially satisfactory in that it included the impress of both ears—something that in many instances must be omitted in the securing of a life mask.

One of the most interesting of all the Lincoln statues is the bronze figure in Lincoln Park at Washington, which shows Lincoln freeing the slave—an emblematic figure of the great emancipator striking the shackles from the hands of a kneeling negro. The significant feature in connection with this unique statue is that it was erected by money contributed through popular subscription by the freed slaves. Another interesting memorial to Lincoln at the capital he saved is found in a simple silver plate on the pew which he always occupied in the church, a few blocks from the White House, of which he was a member. Congress has paid $30,000 for the house in which Lincoln died, and will, in all probability, in time convert it into a Lincoln Memorial Museum under governmental auspices. This will involve the expenditure of considerable money, because the building is now closely hemmed in by other buildings which ought to be torn down in order to properly safeguard the historic building against fire.

The city of New York, which has notable memorials to so many of the nation's heroes, is deficient in testimonials to Lincoln, but this lack is soon to be remedied if the project launched by Joseph H. Choate and other prominent New Yorkers, meets with success. This contemplates the erection in the metropolis of some fitting memorial, possibly a magnificent arch such as the Arch of Triumph, which is one of the chief glories of Paris. A very appropriate form of Lincoln memorial is the present task of placing in all our national cemeteries bronze tablets bearing Lincoln's Gettysburg address. Ultimately these tablets will be placed also in great numbers of schools, public buildings, etc.

Mr. Jinks' Mean Insinuation When Young Lady Disposed Him of His Seat.

"That was adding insult to injury," said Representative Mann, the minority leader of the house, apropos of a political squabble. "It reminds me of young Jinks."

"Late one night young Jinks sat in a crowded trolley car, and when a girl he knew got aboard and stood directly in front of him, he made no sign. His face hidden by his newspaper, he pretended that he didn't know the girl would like to have his seat."

"After a while she spoke. 'Good evening, Mr. Jinks.' 'Why, good evening.' 'I've been to the Primrose social dance.'"

"Indeed? 'Then, after a pause, she added: 'It's a wonder, Mr. Jinks, you wouldn't offer me your seat!'"

"Jinks then got up. He was very angry. He said, as he hooked himself to a strap: 'I thought you wouldn't want it; for as you said you'd been to a dance, I knew you must have been sitting all the evening.'"

A NEW LINCOLN STORY

Senator Teller Relates Anecdote of First Campaign for the Presidency.

Senator Teller of Colorado tells a Lincoln story which he says has never been printed and which in many ways is unique in its interest. None of the students of Lincolniana about Washington remembered the story, and the fact that it could have escaped publication all these years is regarded as remarkable, says the New York Herald's Washington correspondent. It is going the rounds of the capital and causing many laughs.

Henry M. Teller was a young man in the year 1860, when Lincoln was nominated for president. He lived in Illinois and had been drawn into rather close relation with Lincoln. So when the presidential campaign came on this young man was selected to go up to Chicago and assist in the business of receiving delegates, talking Lincoln to them and generally managing the game.

Young Teller got on handsomely and the prospect for Lincoln began to look better to him. The candidates, of course, were all decorously keeping away from the convention city. It would be exceedingly bad form for one of them to appear near the convention. What was the consternation, then, in the Lincoln camp when it was reported one afternoon that "Old Abe" had been seen in town and that he was calling on his Chicago friends and swapping stories about everything except the presidency.

Lincoln must be hustled out of town. It would be ruinous to have it known that he had been in Chicago. Teller was sent to eject him. He found the presidential candidate at a hotel, enjoying himself watching the crowds. Mr. Teller explained his mission, delicately as possible, but very firmly. Mr. Lincoln protested that he didn't have any chance worth bothering about. Mr. Teller insisted that there was an excellent chance, and that the proprieties would have to be observed in these little matters. The New England people were punctilious about such affairs of form. At last Mr. Lincoln yielded.

"I'll go," he said. "I'll do it because I believe you fellows are right."

Any convention that got a good look at me couldn't be expected to nominate me, could it? I'll have a better chance if they don't even find out what I look like."

And at midnight, without half a dozen of the politicians knowing he had been in town, aside from his Illinois friends, he was put on the train and started back to Springfield. Three days later he was the nominee of the Republican party for the presidency. Mr. Lincoln regarded himself as the homeliest man in the country and once told a friend that it was getting the votes of the people who were thankful for not being homely that elected him.

Lincoln's "Way To Do It." A new story on Lincoln emanates from the navy department; but the great emancipator's "way to do it" in this case would be rather dangerous for general adoption.

Early in the war a naval captain decided to enter the Confederate service. His wife pleaded with him to remain with the Union, not only because of loyalty but "because it meant the support of his family." But the resignation was dispatched to the department at Washington, and the wife, left alone with her little family, decided that she would go to the capital and would herself see if something could not be done.

At the navy department she told her story, but the officials said that she was quite too late, because the resignation had been accepted. Finally the secretary, touched by her appeal, suggested that there was one person in the country who might do something for her—that was President Lincoln.

With her luncheon basket on her arm and with her little tota tugging at her skirts, she made her way to the White House. She found the president, and he, having heard her story, at once sent over for the secretary of the navy, that he might see the papers in the case. The secretary, who was himself won to the cause, presented the facts. As Lincoln looked at the anxious little wife, he asked: "Mr. Secretary, is there no way that this can be arranged?" "I know of no possible way, Mr. President." "Let me see the resignation." It was handed to him. He examined the document carefully and then deliberately tore it across and into shreds. "This," he said, turning to the secretary and to the little mother, "this is one way to do it."

Thus the officer remained with the Union because of his wife and the president, and the service-record of this southern captain is among the brightest in the annals of our naval history.—"Affairs at Washington," by Joe Mitchell Chapple, in National Magazine.

Wager Cost Life. A man named Gaul, of Paddington, Eng., was found dead in a van. Early in the evening he made a wager that he would drink thirteen half-pints of beer in less than ten minutes. He won the wager, drinking the beer in seven minutes.

For Cause. He—Why are you always throwing your money in my face? She—Because I can't keep it out of your hands.

MAKES A BIG DISCOVERY

Shortington Finds That Things Once Bemoaned May Prove Greatest Blessing.

"You know how opposites are attracted," said Mr. Shortington. "When I was a younger man my very particular friend and chum was a chap who was six feet four, while I wasn't much more than four feet six. Despite the disparity in our dimensions we were the closest of friends, and as far as I was concerned there was only one thing that marred my otherwise complete happiness and that was that I could not be as tall as he. But the time came when I thought differently about that, and when in fact, he, instead of being proud of his altitude, wished only that he had been built on my more limited scale, and that was when in our later life we had both come to be afflicted with rheumatism. "Then when I looked at him, racked with pain throughout his tall frame, I was glad that I was not tall but short; and when he reflected on the nearly two feet more of space in himself that the rheumatism had to roam over he used to groan and wish that he had been built short like me. "Isn't it singular how things come about? The things that at one time we may most bemoan may prove in the end our greatest blessing."
